Nancy Faeser

Dear Participants,

“Do it well, finish it properly, and move on.” This quote is attributed to Eunice Kennedy Shriver, the founder of the Special Olympics. With these words she calls on us to do our best and to not give up before we have reached the finishing line.

This is why we are here today: to bring together our ideas and help build a shared, inclusive future. And so I would like to warmly welcome you to the first Global Forum for Inclusion organised as part of the 2023 Special Olympics World Games.

The Special Olympics stand for more than just the participation of people with intellectual disabilities in sports. They stand for an inclusive world. We all know about the extraordinary success of this inclusive movement; we admire how far it has come and the milestones it has reached. But we also know that the end of the road to inclusion has not yet been reached.

WELCOME MESSAGE

We have come together today to create a wide safety net that will not break, and that does not end where our responsibilities stop. A net that is tight and strong, supported by the goal of achieving equal participation of people with so-called disabilities in all areas of society.

#UnbeatableTogether – this motto of the Special Olympics World Games can guide us at the Global Forum for Inclusion as we work towards reducing barriers and building bridges. We have come together today to discuss and develop shared visions to achieve this.

Sincerely yours,

Nancy Faeser
Federal Minister of the Interior and Community

Dear Global Forum participant,

Welcome to Special Olympics World Games 2023!

We are on the threshold of a world inclusive of all young people.

Special Olympics athletes know what it takes for an opportunity to compete at World Games—rigorous training regimens, skilled coaches, and adequate facilities.

We know what it takes to create a world inclusive of young people with all abilities – community-based programming, investments in education, and international, interdisciplinary cooperation.

Participating in the Global Forum for Inclusion is joining the delegation of champions advocating for policies and programs that smash stigma and eradicate the fear of difference.

WELCOME MESSAGE

I encourage you to draw inspiration from the Special Olympics athletes competing at the World Games as you consider your role in expanding the transformative power of inclusion. They have dug deep for determination when the world was indifferent to them.

Millions of brilliant, talented individuals have been left out of global initiatives for health, education, poverty reduction, and basic human rights. Just as the Berlin wall marked the beginning of unification for this city, these World Games mark the beginning of belonging for people left on the margins.

An unprecedented 11-partner media alliance will broadcast the World Games around the world, and it is up to you to maintain the momentum of the Games in your own spheres of influence. But you are not alone in this quest. The people you will meet at the Global Forum for Inclusion are also on this journey, and together we will tear down the walls of exclusion.

You are the leaders Special Olympics athletes need.

You are the leaders the world needs.

You are #UnbeatableTogether.

Sincerely,

Mary Davis

Dear participants of the Global Forum for Inclusion – Partnering for Action

It is with immense pleasure that we welcome you to the Special Olympics World Games Berlin 2023 and more precisely to the Global Forum for Inclusion.

Together with you, we would like to develop new ideas and concrete steps so that inclusion can be lived in everyday life. The Games in Berlin are the Games from athletes for athletes.

It is our vision to shape a society in which children and youth grow up inclusively. We are therefore very happy that with the Global Forum and together with the athletes and youth leaders we are creating another groundbreaking inclusive format.

WELCOME MESSAGE

With the Berlin Declaration we want to contribute to enhancing participation at local level, to improving the access to education and sport offers and to greater consideration of the needs of people with disabilities in the context of international cooperation and development work.

We want to create encounters to tear down the walls in people's minds. But to be successful, we need you. Therefore, we are looking very much forward to the exchange with you during the days of the Global Forum and then on during the Special Olympic World Games.

Let us act together - #UnbeatableTogether for an inclusive society!

Sincerely yours,

Sven Albrecht

The Berlin Declaration

Inclusive Education and Communities through Sports Global Game Changer for Youth of All Abilities

WHEREAS the participants in the Global Forum for Inclusion Partnering for Action, the first ever international congress happening during Special Olympics World Games which brings together participants of the Global Athlete Congress and the Global Youth Leadership Summit with representatives of national governments, international organizations, NGOs and researchers, have assembled in Berlin, Germany to celebrate the 2023 Special Olympics World Summer Games, the largest global sporting event of the year, and who also came to the city to join forces in the quest of driving inclusion forward around the world, leaving a fundamental legacy with this Berlin Declaration inviting every single person in the world to join by signing;

WHEREAS the athletes of Special Olympics, competing in year-round sports training and competition in communities around the world stand firm in their hope of a world where all communities offer sports for people with intellectual disabilities and all schools are welcoming of a diversity of talents and gifts;

WHEREAS governments, who have agreed to underscore the need for urgent action to propel inclusive education for students of all ability levels, with a particular focus on students with intellectual disabilities, and in view that improving local sports participation and well-being strengthens communities in general;

THE BERLIN DECLARATION

WHEREAS industry leaders recognize the importance of investing in inclusive education as a material component of Environmental, Social, and Governance performance and credibility, a key to unlocking potential and performance, and a precondition for reaping the benefits of diverse workforces;

WHEREAS global development stakeholders recognize and reaffirm the need for increased investment in inclusive education for students of different abilities, especially for women and girls, as well as the role that inclusive sports plays in every corner of the world in the academic journey, in values education that fosters social cohesion and promotes human rights, in developing core skills for life and work in the 21st century, and for lifelong health;

WHEREAS academic leaders are committed to supporting research, evaluation, and analytics to strengthen inclusive education especially through sports programming for students of all abilities;

WHEREAS global philanthropy leaders anticipate investing in the expansion, through sports, of inclusive communities and inclusive education and the role that whole-school engagement can play in strengthening school climates for all students and faculty wherever in the world;

WHEREAS anyone signing this declaration supports the beforementioned stakeholders in their quest to achieve inclusion on all levels and anywhere in the world:

We all call upon governments and the global community to pledge action toward (a) creating, coordinating, and integrating appropriate cross-sectoral public policies making inclusive sports in schools part of the academic and educational journey of all students, (b) allocating financing, including official development assistance, adequate to ensure the progressive realization of said policies, starting with ensuring that at least 3% of education budgets support inclusive education programming for students with disabilities, (c) upon achieving at least 3% of education budget for inclusive education programming, continue to striving to achieve an education budget that fully supports a comprehensive education for all students with disabilities, and (d) support especially Special Olympics to offer community-level inclusive sports worldwide.

We all call upon all governments worldwide to engage youth with and without intellectual disabilities to inform policy- and decision-making on how best to make schools, sports clubs, and communities fully inclusive for all students and participants, with the engagement of their parliaments and Ministries of Education, Sport, Social Welfare, Economy and International Cooperation and Development.

We all commit to concerted action to promote and invest in the transformative power of inclusive education through sports in every school, in every sports club, in every community, in every nation, around the world.

The Berlin Declaration

Inclusive Education and Communities through Sports Global Game Changer for Youth of All Abilities

Who we are:

We are the participants in the Global Forum for Inclusion - Partnering for Action. The Global Forum for Inclusion takes place during the Special Olympics World Games 2023 in Berlin. The 2023 World Games are the largest global sporting event of the year.

We are, for example, athletes, representatives of national governments or researchers. And we want to foster inclusion all over the world.

With the Berlin Declaration, we invite every single person in the world to join us by signing.

And more precisely we are...

...athletes of Special Olympics competing in year-round sports training and competitions around the world. We stand firm in our hope of a world where all communities offer sports for people with ID and all schools are welcoming different talents and gifts.

...governments that have understood the need to foster inclusive education for students of all ability levels, with a particular focus on students with ID, considering that improving local sports participation strengthens communities in general.

...stakeholders and industry leaders that recognize the need for increased investment in inclusive education for students of different abilities, especially for women and girls, and the importance of sport.

THE BERLIN DECLARATION - SIMPLE LANGUAGE (SUMMARY)

...academic leaders that are committed to supporting research, evaluation, and analytics to strengthen inclusive education especially through sports.

...people from all over the world who sign the Declaration because we want to support the goals and demands of the Declaration.

What we demand:

- We call upon all global governments to
- take all measures that are necessary to make school sport inclusive.
- provide adequate funding to implement these measures.
- use at least 3% of the education budget for pupils with ID.
- aim for an even larger budget that fully supports all students with disabilities.
- support Special Olympics to promote and challenge inclusive sport worldwide.

And we call upon all governments worldwide to involve young people with and without disabilities to inform politics on how schools, sports clubs and communities can become inclusive for all.

We also commit to promoting inclusive education through sport in every school, every sports club, every community, every nation, everywhere in the world.

Special Olympics athlete leadership impacts communities

Presentation with Q&A

Speakers:

- Daniel Smrokowski, Sargent Shriver International Global Messenger (SSIGM), SO Illinois, USA
- Emanuelle Dutra de Souza, Sargent Shriver International Global Messenger (SSIGM), SO Brazil

Abstract:

Building inclusive communities for people with intellectual or developmental disabilities (I/DD) means thoughtful reflection and action from all. In this session, you will hear how Special Olympics has transformed the lives of people with I/DD through year-round sports and leadership training. They will share how what they have learned and experienced in Special Olympics has made them better people, better leaders, and better employees. They will also discuss steps that people without I/DD can take to be more inclusive.

Abstract Easy Language:

Special Olympics athletes share how sports and leadership training have changed their lives and those in their communities.

BREAKOUT SESSIONS

- Caitlin Baran, Athlete Leadership Coordinator, Special Olympics International (SOI); Athlete, SO Pennsylvania
- Amy Ramírez Estrada, Youth Leader, SO El Salvador
- Gabriela Velásquez Rodríguez, Youth Leader, SO El Salvador

Abstract:

Where will society meet in the future? Cultural places look different in each country and community. One thing, they all have in common: the idea of being places where people meet and get together. In the event, examples, visions and elements for inclusive meeting places are being collected.

How would people with intellectual disabilities design spaces to enjoy culture, broaden perspectives and exchange ideas? What topics and activities are there to initiate shared experiences for people with and without disabilities? And how can politics contribute to the success of inclusive places?

The event will be held in a “fishbowl” format with inputs and audience participation. With your inputs from different perspectives and backgrounds, our illustrator will create one large drawing. We are looking forward to inspirational results!

At Futurium, the house of futures in Berlin, everything revolves around the question: „How do we want to live?“. We invite everyone and want to encourage them to shape the future themselves. This explicitly includes persons with disabilities. As part of the activities for the Special Olympics World Games in Berlin, Futurium hosts this participatory event at the Global Forum on Inclusion.

Abstract in easy language:

This session explores how people with ID can create places to enjoy culture and exchange ideas, and how politics can support these ideas.

Who drives deinstitutionalization? How to realize independent living? Strategies and practices

Panel Discussion

Moderator:

- Maureen McCormick, SOI Global Ambassador, Special Olympics International (SOI)

Panelists:

- Dr. Dorothy Nakato Mubezi, Co-founder and Executive Director, Uganda National Self-Advocacy Initiative (UNSAI)
- Ian Harper, Sargent Shriver International Global Messenger (SSIGM), SO Great Britain
- Iván Castellanos Nájera, National Program Associate, United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA), Mexico
- HRH Prince Mired bin Raad Zeid Al-Hussein, the Lord Chamberlain of Jordan
- Milan Šveřepa, Director, Inclusion Europe

Abstract in easy language:

Most people without disabilities can lead a self-determined life. But most people with ID have difficulties to lead a self-determined life because they have to face many barriers. This session explores chance and challenges.

Ensuring healthy lives for everyone – access to health for people with disabilities

Presentation with Q&A

Speakers:

- Danae Rodríguez Gatta, Fellow, The Missing Billion Initiative
- Sara Rotenberg, Fellow, The Missing Billion Initiative
- Marie Kehoe-O'Sullivan, National Disability Specialist, Health Service Executive (HSE), Ireland
- Brina Maxino, Sargent Shriver International Global Messenger (SSIGM), SO Philippines

Abstract:

Being healthy is important for creating strong and thriving communities. When we are in good health, we can fully develop our potential in life, contribute to society, and have access to education and jobs. While everyone should have the right to healthcare, people with disabilities often face more challenges than others when trying to access health services. The healthcare system is not designed with their needs in mind. As a result, 1.3 billion people around the world have poorer health because of these barriers. In this session, we want participants to learn more about this issue and find practical solutions to make healthcare more inclusive. We will share important facts about the difficulties faced by people with disabilities in accessing healthcare, listen to lived experiences of people with disabilities, and showcase examples of inclusive practices in the health sector. We will discuss what it means to have healthcare that includes and supports people with disabilities, and explore the actions that different individuals and groups can take to make it a reality.

Abstract in easy language

The session discusses the issue of limited access to healthcare for persons with ID and explores solutions to make healthcare more accessible.

From a segregated workshop to university – People with disabilities work as educational specialists at university

Presentation with Q&A

Speakers:

- Samuel Wunsch, Education Specialist, Institute for Inclusive Education at University of Kiel, Germany
- Annika Hase, Deputy Head of Educational Activities, Institute for Inclusive Education at University of Kiel, Germany

Abstract:

The Institute for Inclusive Education at the University of Kiel developed a vocational three-year qualification for people with so-called intellectual disabilities that enables them to work at universities as lecturers. Educational specialists communicate the lives and needs of people with disabilities to students. In order to improve the participation of people with disabilities and bridge the divide between the segregated world of people with disabilities and the higher education sector, the project puts into practice three articles from the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (CRPD):

- Article 24 (Education): A higher education is provided by offering qualifications for people with so-called intellectual disabilities over a period of 3 years.
- Article 27 (Work/ Employment): The educational specialists are employed on the first labour market at the university.
- Article 8 (Awareness-raising): The educational specialists convey inclusion competencies to future professionals through their seminars and lectures.

In this presentation, the educational specialist Samuel Wunsch and the educational partner Annika Hase give an impression of the Institute's history and the development of the qualification. They offer an insight into the educational work of the educational specialists at the university. In addition, Samuel Wunsch shares his experiences in regards to his educational and professional path.

At the end of the presentation, the participants exchange thoughts with the person next to them and get a chance to address Samuel Wunsch and Annika Hase with their questions.

Abstract in easy language:

The Institute for Inclusive Education at the University of Kiel has developed a qualification program for people with ID. It enables them to work as lecturers at universities.

Abstract:

Discovering your own strengths, naming them and making them visible to others can be a big challenge. Knowing and showing one's own strengths is of particular importance for both personal and school contexts and especially in the transition to the professional and working world. The focus of this research and development project 'SeiP' is on young people at the transition from school to work with wide-ranging needs. SeiP aims to support disadvantaged young people through so-called 'Selbstinszenierungspraktiken' (which means a combination of practices for self-awareness, self-realisation and self-acceptance in a process which we are developing in our project). The project supports young people to recognize their strengths and makes them visible to others using multimodal formats. The aim of the presentation is to show how these young people can discover and build up their strengths and also can be strengthened by using principles of strength orientation and self-determination for the transition to the training and labor market. We will present materials and methods developed together with teachers and social workers and we also provide insights into our co-operation with schools.

Abstract in easy language:

The SeiP project wants to support young people before they start working by helping them to discover their own strengths.

Training the next generation of sports coaches with disabilities

Workshop

Speakers:

- Peter Ackred, CEO, Disability Sports Coach, United Kingdom
- Hannah Paton, Workforce Officer, Disability Sports Coach, United Kingdom

Abstract:

The UK charity, Disability Sports Coach (DSC), uses sport to enhance the lives of people with various disabilities and their families in London through weekly clubs, online activity sessions, and inclusive activities in schools, colleges, and community groups. DSC also trains coaches, teachers, and organizations to confidently deliver inclusive activities and provides people with disabilities with opportunities to begin a career in sports coaching.

The 'Inclusive Activity Leaders' project ran from September 2022 to May 2023 and aimed to diversify the workforce, upskilling people with and without disabilities as coaches to deliver inclusive sport and reach more people with disabilities. The workshop explores barriers faced by individuals with disabilities, with a focus on those with intellectual disabilities and learning difficulties, in coaching qualifications and shares recommendations to overcome these challenges from course applications to assessments.

Abstract in easy language:

The UK charity Disability Sports Coach uses sport to improve the lives of people with ID and their families. They also train coaches, teachers, and organizations to offer inclusive activities and to give people with disabilities the opportunity to start working in sports coaching.

- Genevieve Bamwidhukire, National Director SO Uganda, Sport for Development Trainer (GIZ), Uganda
- Vanja Vrdinova, Sport for Development Trainer, North Macedonia

Abstract:

Sport for Development is the intentional use of physical activity and sport to achieve specific development objectives. With our work we aim to reduce inequalities in and through sport and foster learning opportunities for all young people. Together with partners from state, civil society and the private sector in many countries around the globe, German Development Cooperation works towards more inclusive societies.

In this session we would like to take you with us into our work in the Western Balkans, Uganda and other countries and regions around the globe. See and experience how we understand and apply sports. Reflect with us how Sport for Development can be adapted for inclusive groups. Exchange with our trainers about the possibilities and challenges of inclusive sport work. Jump in and we will share our experienced-based learnings with you in a practical and fun way.

- Nyasha Derera, Sargent Shriver International Global Messenger (SSIGM) SO Zimbabwe, Board of Directors, Special Olympics International (SOI)
- Eric Braun, Co-Founder and CFO Eye-Able, Germany
- Charmaine Daniels, CEO, DIGICEL Foundation, Caribbean

Abstract:

The panel will discuss the impact of digitalization on individuals with intellectual disabilities (ID), while considering the potential opportunities and challenges inherent in organizational modernization. We'll explore how digital technologies can improve the lives of people with ID by providing greater access to information, communication, and services. We'll also evaluate the potential risks and challenges, such as digital exclusion and the need for tailored support and training with an emphasis on the importance of ensuring that people with ID are included in the digital transformation and that their unique needs are addressed to fully realize the potential benefits of digitalization.

Abstract in easy language:

Digitalization can contribute to inclusion, e.g., by enabling people with ID to participate in society through online offers. However, there are also some challenges and problems, e.g., if people with ID are not informed and trained about the negative aspects of digitalization.

Health literacy for people with intellectual disabilities – adapting health information or a real chance for empowerment?

Lecture with Panel discussion

Panelists:

- Dr. Dirk Bruland, Research Associate, Health Department, Hochschule Bielefeld – University of Applied Sciences and Arts (HSBI), Germany
- Nils Sebastian Vetter, Research Associate, Health Department, Hochschule Bielefeld – University of Applied Sciences and Arts (HSBI), Germany

Abstract:

To promote health literacy among people with intellectual disabilities, eight explanatory videos were developed in a participatory research project (GeKo-MmgB). Health literacy implies the achievement of knowledge level and personal skills to take action to improve personal health. Up to now, a target group-oriented approach has not been adequately conceptualized. A major criticism is a dominant functional view, e. g. only converting health-related information into easy-to-understand language. In our project the health literacy framework were modified target-group-specific and used for the videos. Through participatory involvement of potential users, videos were developed addressing relevant health topics. Geko-MmgB presented the experiences of preparing information in a way that adequately reaches many people with intellectual disabilities and leading to action. Also the way health literacy is understood and improved in a target group-specific manner, which is critical to empowerment.

Abstract in easy language:

Presentation with Q&A

Speaker:

- Nico Leonhardt, Research Associate, Faculty of Education,
University of Leipzig, Germany

Abstract:

Even today, there are still many barriers to the implementation of inclusive political and social participation. People with experience of disability often do not have full access to all important and necessary information. This is often a big problem, for example, when it comes to elections and politics in general. In the inclusive project QuaBIS, a material for political education was therefore developed at the University of Leipzig. This material was developed in cooperation with people with learning difficulties in order to make people aware of the topic of politics and elections in understandable language. In our 'Interactive Presentation', we would like to introduce our project and the material we have created. Then we want to discuss the material with you. We want to find out which barriers, possibilities and materials you know in the field of political and social participation. What are the similarities and differences? We look forward to the exchange with you!

From the right to inclusive education

An educational governance perspective
Workshop

Speaker:

- Prof. Dr. Heike Tiemann, Inclusive Education in Germany / Special Olympics Germany Research Council, University of Leipzig, Germany

Abstract:

There can be many reasons why teachers teach physical education the way they do. Some, for example, teach physical education almost as they experienced it themselves in their own school days, while others were or are active in competitive sport outside of school and transfer the aims, content and methods of competitive sport to physical education in school. The interactive workshop specifies the question posed at the beginning and discusses possible explanations as to why teachers design inclusive physical education in a certain way. Fundamental in this context are perspectives of educational governance, a research approach that examines the maintenance and transformation of social orders in the education system, focusing in particular on the coordination of actions between different actors.

Lifelong learning for all?! How to support learning pathways for adults with learning difficulties Workshop

Speakers:

- Prof. Dr. Silke Schreiber-Barsch, Full Professor in Adult Education, Faculty of Educational Sciences, University of Duisburg-Essen, Germany
- Dr. Wiebke Curdt, Research assistant, Faculty of Educational Science, University of Duisburg-Essen, Germany

Abstract:

This workshop discusses the learning pathways of adults with learning difficulties. The United Nations' Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities and an inclusive education claim that lifelong learning is for all.

But does 'for all' also, in reality, mean 'for all'?

To participate in lifelong learning, it is important to show and to record one's own abilities and competencies. To support this, we present a portfolio-instrument: It is called MEIN.Profil = MY.profile. We have developed this portfolio-instrument in a participatory research project. It allows adults with learning difficulties in an easy-accessible and resource-oriented way to show their interests and strengths. And it allows to record one's own abilities and competencies in basic reading and writing and simple math in daily life.

This helps to move on in activities in free-time, school or also at work.

We show the participants how MY.profile looks like, how it works and what benefits it provides for adult learners. And, we are looking forward to your feed-back!

Panelists:

- Dr. Dimitri Christakis, Vice President, Global Health Promotion, Prevention, and Policy Advocacy, Special Olympics International (SOI), USA
- Stephanie Jones, Gerald S. Lesser Professor in Early Childhood Development, Harvard University, USA

Abstract:

The early childhood years are critical for all children, and particularly so for children with intellectual and developmental disabilities (IDD). These years are a time of great vulnerability for the general health and well-being of a child and can impact their foundation for life-long health and development. Effective early childhood development (ECD) and early interventions are critical in supporting the health of a child and their entire family, while also positively impacting a family's life course by supporting development and future outcomes. This breakout will highlight the value and impact of inclusive ECD interventions on children with IDD and showcase successful models for impacting child health, development, and early learning.

Mental health and sport

Presentation with Q&A

Speakers:

- Dr. Skye Arthur-Banning, Fellow, US Center for Mental Health & Sport, USA
- Margaret Domka, Executive Director, US Center for Mental Health & Sport, USA

Abstract:

Over the past year, our sport community has seen many athletes struggling with depression or anxiety. In the United States, 1 in 4 players experience a mental disorder over the course of a year. It is unlikely that anyone who coaches a team is completely free of concern about mental health challenges. Individuals with intellectual disabilities are at higher risk of co-occurring mental health challenges, making awareness in the Special Olympics community even more important. The good news is that as coaches, mentors, or peers, we can make a difference – WE CAN SAVE LIVES! This session is designed to discuss protective and risk factors of sport environments, the steps that you can take to protect the mental health of your athletes and yourselves, while seeking to improve a player's fitness, and enjoyment of the sport. We will also discuss the mental health challenges that come with "Big Event" let down that is often seen in athletes after a large event like the World Games draws to a close. Together, we can continue to bring mental health to the forefront of sporting environments at all levels.

Abstract in easy language:

It is unlikely that someone who coaches a team does not have to worry about mental health issues. People with intellectual disabilities have a higher risk of mental health problems. So raising awareness of this issue in the Special Olympics community is very important. The good news is that we as coaches, mentors or peers can make a difference - WE CAN SAVE LIVES! This session will focus on protective and risk factors and actions you can take to protect the mental health of your athletes and yourself. Sports funding opportunities for the German Federal Foreign Office with special focus on inclusion

Presentation with Q&A

Speaker:

- Torsten Hilscher, Department of International Sport-Relations, German Federal Foreign Office (AA)

Abstract:

The German FO disposes of special budgets for the International Sport Promotion and the funding of sports projects in DAC countries.

The projects shall strengthen and support the development of civil society structures long term. The program is focused on

- girls, women and other socially marginalized / excluded / disadvantaged groups
- Para sports projects and
- Inclusion in sport

Inclusion in sport is understood as support for all members of the society regardless of their sex, gender, ethnicity, disabilities, religion etc. by means of sports projects. Especially international sport events should function as an inclusive element for all members of the society.

This session showcases examples of different projects and encourages the audience to discuss why such projects are important and what is needed to make them successful.
