Venue Overview
Sports Information

Why do we Play Sport?

At Special Olympics, a more inclusive world begins with sports, and the impact extends far beyond the playing field. Athletes learn skills like discipline and teamwork, which are directly transferrable to schools, workplaces, healthcare, and communities.

What is Divisioning?

Special Olympics competitions are structured so that athletes compete with other athletes of similar ability in equitable divisions. This practice marks one of the fundamental differences between Special Olympics competitions and those of most other sports organizations.

What is Unified Sports® Experience?

Special Olympics Unified Sports® Experiences are a series of non-official Special Olympics sports exhibition activities that bring together Special Olympics athletes with professional and Olympic sports personalities, dignitaries, celebrities, and fans in fun and competitive sports events.
Sport Specific Information

Special Olympics Feature:
In the rules of the Federation Internationale de Gymnastique, only females are allowed to compete in rhythmic gymnastics. At Special Olympics, males can compete in the lower levels, too. Special Olympics also offers a level of competition for athletes who perform seated.

Hand-eye coordination, dexterity, flexibility, and power are the most important physical abilities that rhythmic gymnasts need to have.

We have eight disciplines:

1. Individual event: rope
2. Individual event: hoop
3. Individual event: ball
4. Individual event: ribbon
5. Individual event: clubs
